The Unofficial Newsletter of the Barony of Windmasters' Hill

March 2005

Welcome to the Windlore!

This is a picture of fish. It could be a picture of anything, but in this case, it is fish. FISH ARE GOOD.

Hello, and welcome to this faux copy of the Windlore. It is not an actual copy of the windlore. It does not actually list real events, people, places, or anything really useful. Mostly it's me rambling. It is not meant to offend in any way, and if it does I apologize. It is submitted for your approval to look over it to see if the format will work for you, the populous in general. Please download it and print it. Tell me if anything blows up. This actual space would tell welcome you and tell you how to go about getting a paper copy of the windlore sent to you. It would also include a couple of necessary pieces of info (Such as info on reprinting letters or articles, please respect rights of other people, don't take wooden nickels, sit on broken glass or eat what you find in the couch, etc.). Send any and all comments to me,

Letter from Their Excellencies

This is the part where their excellencies do the cheer-leading thing and tell us all about what they would like to see us doing more of and telling us to stop doing things that are bad. I get a lot of that second part. Here is a sample of what might be here-

Greetings to the Great and Glorious Populace of our fair Barony from Their Excellencies, Flatulus and Flatulatia of Wind's Passing-

We are well pleased with the good works of this populace, but we would like to see more groveling, simpering and bootlicking in future events. Also beans. We like beans. Kidney, fava, lima, green, string, brown, bean gumbo, bean burger, bean salad, three bean casserole, bean curd, bean jello, and beanie weanie chili stew.

The Following Gentle has been banned from our presence:

Dunstan LeHeryngmongere.

You're Mine in Service,

The Head Honchos

Seneschal's Missive

This is where the legal representative of this group of SCA loonies talks about the nightmares he or she is having from all of the legal (and mildly illegal) stuff going on.

It may well run something like this:

Greetings, Slack offs, from The Honorable Lord Serious-Glutton-for-Punishment, your seneschal-

A notice has come down from corporate that from here on out all scadians at officially recognized SCA events must wear only clothes with no polyester in them. Those caught breaking this rule will be publicly flogged with a real leather whip. Also, public displays of affection by those playing devoutly Christian personas will result in immediate excommunication. By the nearest scadian playing a holy person. Also, there is to be absolutely no fire eating near the tree line. This means you, Bard.

-Your seneschal.

Chronicler's Quill

Yeah. So anyway, this is where the chronicler (that's me) says something intelligent. Or, in my case, something unintelligible. Most months I anticipate that it will be me saying 'Hey you lazy slack offs, send me some stuff to put in this watered down rag of a newsletter.' Although I will say it much nicer, because lord knows putting it that way isn't too motivational, and my middle name is subtlety. Or is it Edward? You decide . . . Anyway, have a nice day and please remember this issue is just in good fun. No offense meant. Really. When I want to offend you, I'll right a song about you, darnit.

-Dunstan LeHeryngmongere

Abject Plea from the Chronicler-

SEND STUFF. I need STUFF to put in this newsletter. Please. Don't make me whimper. Just do it.

OFFICER'S REPORTS

A&S Officer's Scroll

This would be another fine report from the person in charge of artsy fartsy endeavors in the Barony. There's probably some updates on local guild meetings, some descriptions of upcoming competitions, and some kind of pathetic plea for help with the latest project gone wild. There will also be a little blurb about how many talented people there are in the Barony who need to get off their *&^%! and create some cool crap. Go Windmaster's!

Upcoming classes may well be mentioned here as well, including the most valuable 'Brief Treatise on Belly Button Lint Use in 8th century Nicaraguan Stews and Cordials'.

Yours in really cool garb,
fully documented and hand stitched, Artsy Fartsy Diva Queen.

$ Exchequer's Balance $

Takes money to play. This is where the very hard working exchequer tells you how much we've got in the bank and how much of it is already allocated. Lately it's been something to the effect of 'We've got 12,000.00 in the bank but 10,000.00 of it is already spoken for. Good God! What have we signed ourselves up for people? If you want to know, ask the exchequer. Just remember; speak softly and bring chocolate. This job is stressful, darn it!

-Yours in service
Count DaMoney

Another Letter from Whatever Officer Actually bothered to turn in a letter this month.

Okay, so it could be no other officer did, or it could be that lots did. You get the point. Anyway, plenty of space for anyone with interest, apathetic people need not apply. I personally am shooting for a new Baronial Position- Baronial Slackbuster, who moves from person to person who is slacking off and kicks them twice, softly at first. I expect to be kicked often. I heard Lady Phillipa volunteered for the job. (Course, she gotta bad case of helium hand anyway.)

- Yours in Service,
Anonymous Scantily Clad Officer
of some bizarre office.

*15th century way to say 'I Love you two dear'
That's right. I said it. Tax me. I dare you.*

Minutes from the Baronial Meeting that took place on Whatever Last Month Was

This is where we begin the lengthy task of documenting all the cool and incredibly interesting little factuals and conversions that took place in discussions during the last Baronial Meeting. Since I cannot often make Baronial Meetings personally, I will be looking for people willing to take down the minutes and send them to me. I currently do have a person who does a great job of taking down minutes, but that person may actually want a day off once in a while, so I am looking for volunteers as back ups for minute taking at Baronial Meetings. Please note that just taking the minutes is not the entire job. You have to take them AND then give them to me. (This is a give and take job, just like you like it.) Please contact me if you are interested in helping out with this.

Have I mentioned I need deputies, too? If you have an interest in newsletter production, an enthusiastic nature and a reasonably reliable pulse, you're hired!

Contact me at rangernealson at aol.com.

Anyway, getting back to the Baronial Minutes, this is where we list everything we talked about in the meeting. There will be a list of who said what and when. We are likely to start it off with opening statements by their excellencies and possibly by the seneschal, visiting dignitaries, and anyone else who just wants to say 'Hey, whassup with your home Barony self?' We will likely then move on to ...

Officer's Report's

This of course being a rather long and lengthy list of which officers reported what. In the interest of giving you an idea of how long these reports would be on the average, I shall now furnish false, brief reports from every officer and skip a few lines to represent what that person would say.

The Chatelaine- said we need more new people and proposed indentured service or recruiting at sweat shops. Motion passed.

The Chirurgeon recommended we all stop smoking and excersize more. Also, fiber is good and lard is bad. Fibrous lard, surprisingly enough, causes instant harmonious equilibrium followed shortly thereafter by death. Motion to disallow fibrous lard from all official event feasts. Motion passed.

The Chronicler- said he was trying the newest in Herring essence deodorants. He really didn't have to tell anyone that, because the wilting plants around him made it quite obvious. Motion to make chronicler move far away from the Baron's Table. Motion passed. Chronicler forced to sit VERY far away.

The Heavy Marshall said that he had lost a few pounds and preferred to now be called the Only-slightly-heavier-than-average marshall. The Heavy marshall was then forced to sit next to the Chronicler.

The Minister of Arts and Sciences declared that she needed assistance in accurately finishing up the hand-made genuine 15th century Etruscan nose hair clippers to give to the King and Queen as largesse. It was determined that Master Magnus had three separate volumes of literature devoted to the topic and that he should be consulted.

The MOL has lost her grocery list. Has anyone seen it?

The Webminister reported that he has recently finished development of a new video game designed to sold as fundraiser for the Barony. The title of the new game will be 'Death Race 1350'. It will include plague infested sheep's carcasses and other light-hearted material. Rated E for everyone. (or eviscerating. Whatever)

The Quartermaster has requested that people stop handing her their miscellaneous crap. Nuf said.

The Warlord reports that you're all a big bunch of slack offs and you need to fight more.

The Chancellor Minor wondered aloud why she had ever been silly enough to take this job while running around in circles after her child. Once she caught him she hung him upside down and tickled him mercilessly while singing a silly song. Then she collapsed.

The Exchequer said that we have a lot of money and most of it is allocated already. Someone suggested we run a couple more events this year in the Barony and the exchequer hit them with her very weighty financial ledger book. The Chirurgeon was consulted and suggested fibrous lard as a cure. Motion passed.

The Seneschal mentioned that soon he will be taking a mundane job with the post office and expects the stress in his life to go down considerably after that. Then he giggled maniacally and begin mumbling something about honeydew melons. Sedatives were considered.

Canton Reports

Attilium reported that they are working on perfecting teleportation devices because they are too far away from all the meetings.

Buckston reported that they are going to run at least 17 more demos before the end of the year and would like everyone to come and talk about something. The chronicler mentioned 'Uses of Herring Parts in period' and was asked to move further away.

Elvegast insists that by this time next year they will have ceded from the Barony and become their own independent Hamlet of Elvegast. Efenwealt was spanked for no apparent reason.

K-Berg mentioned that everyone is invited to their social nights and that Chapel hill was declared akin to a zoo by past government officials. What more reason do you need to go to K-Berg for Goodness sake?

Nimenfeld mentioned cows a lot. Something about cows and nimenfeld that I just don't get . . . I mean, what's up with the darn cows? I know they won't hold me personally accountable for my confusion though, because to err is human but to forgive is bovine. Or Something. Anyway, Nimenfeld is having a bake sale. Aren't they always?

OLD BUSINESS

This is where old business is talked about. A-duh. I can't think of any good old business, so I have included instead some critical Latin phrases for you to memorize. Test next Tuesday.

Old business continued on page 4

Dues Dabit Vela. Nil homini certum est et virtus pramium est optimum

God will fill the sails, nothing is certain to man and virtue is it's own best reward.

Tu no cede malis desperanda tibi
salva concordia socru.

Do not yield to your misfortunes, but give up all hope of peace, as long as your mother in law is alive.

Non amo te . . . nec possum dicere
quare: Hoc tantum possum dicere,
non amo te.

*I don't like you, and I can't say why:
but I can say this: I don't like you.*

Sentio Aliquos Togatos . . . contra me conspirare

I think some people in togas are plotting against me

Fac me cocleario vomere!

Gag me with a spoon!

NEW BUSINESS

Okay, based on the title, this section probably talks about . . . you guessed it. NEW Business.

So here's some more Latin for you.

Catapultum habeo . . . nisi pecuniam omnem mihi dabis ad caput
tuum saxum immane mittam

I have a catapult . . . give me all your money, or I will fling an enormous rock at your head.

Antiquis temporibus, nati tibi simi-exponebantur ad necem.

In the good old days, children like you were left to perish on windswept crags.

Quantum materiae materiatur
marmota monax si marmota
monax materium possit
materiari?

How much wood would a wood-chuck chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood?

As a final piece of new business,
it was requested that people stop being so silly. Motion rejected.

Meeting was adjourned at 8:30 PM. Here ends the minutes.

“Remember, this is all meant in good fun.”

-Marqui de Sade.

The Many Variants of Medieval Rabbit Cheeses

A fascinating article by Master Peer
E.Od Nazih. (Bob Bobson)

This could well be the beginning of a masterful article on any number of bizarre topics. It could include pictures, tables, graphs, or just blather. Whatever it includes, it is sure to keep you riveted to your very seat with all manner of interesting adjectives and very long bibliographies.

I envision this one starting off something to the effect of 'Many people would not have thought that rabbits could be milked for cheese, but the ingenious 11th century Rabbit milking nomads of central Umbaziville (located near present day Luxembourg) had a well documented history of milkin' the little suckers and making some truly unusual (and very stinky) cheeses from what they managed to milk. As you can well imagine, it was not an easy process, and the fact that the locals chose to do it points to large scale boredom, gross incompetence or, at the very least, very strange personal habits. In any case, imagine the time involved and the tools you would need and really how do you catch those little guys and keep them still long enough to milk them? It kind of boggles to mind to be truthful.

So blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah something about the habits of rabbits and maybe nuns too blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah something

A Day at The Feast of the Tourney of the Chalice of the Jongleurie February 30th, 31st Canton of Wayyoutdere (Hoboken, NJ)

An event description. This little sucker's gonna be chock full of wonderful facts about some event in the Barony or Kingdom. Cows will most certainly be included in the description if Nimenfeld is at all involved.

Martial Activities- this will be a brief description which will include what means of killing other people you should bring.

Arts and Sciences- will prepare you for what artistic challenges lie ahead. Often these involve hauling eight metric tons of documentation along with you to prove that people did use feathers as SOFT materials and rocks as HARD materials. Go with it.

Feast- here will be included the name of the feast preparer and the use of the words tantalizing and sumptuous. You don't see those words often, but you do in every event flyer since the dawn of time.

FEE SCHEDULE

Herein will be a table which will tell you exactly what you'll be spending on this little shindig. Don't worry, it's a good cause, and you can always refinance your home anyway.

This will include the address of the site and any pertinent (or impertinent) site restrictions. Expect to see things like; DRY site. No dogs, cats, horses, pigs, or other domestic livestock. Tourney of the Hidden Thingie

March 30th, 31st
Canton of Huh?

Yep. Another event description. We all know that around here there's going to be at least two or three events advertised. Get used to it.

Martial Activities- coed naked schlager fest will be held at the large pavilion. Anyone not interested in that is dead.

Arts and Sciences- the theme for this event is 'things you do not readily notice' The entry that receives the least recognition will win a hardly noticeable accolade. Be there or go unnoticed.

Feast- bread, cheese, and a lot of other stuff that is not bread and cheese that your kids won't eat. For food allergies, contact the local food allergy distributor and they'll give you some free of charge.

Take a left turn at Albuquerque. Or is it a right? In truth, ever since I spent too much time watching Bugs Bunny as a kid I can never turn properly when I hit Albuquerque, unless of course I am driving through on I-40, in which case generally speaking I don't even stop there, because I once stopped there at a gas station and they were selling snacks at the counter called 'New Mexican Love Muffins', and I have never been the same since. Really, it changed me into a more frightened and cynical person.

It is interesting to note; only female rabbits were milked in period as near as I can tell.

Blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah subsequent attempts did yield exactly enough milk to make one slice of rabbit cheese blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah most repulsive thing I ever ate. And let me tell you something, I've been to a lot of SCA feasts and during that time have eaten some really strange stuff. Once I even ate something teal colored. What it was I do not know, but it did offend my delicate sensibilities.

So in conclusion I would like to say that this was one of the dumber projects blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah and I have asked my friends to beat me senseless if they ever see me trying to milk rabbits again.

AND in Conclusion

So ends the faux newsletter, which has the capability of being much longer. It may well be that the actual newsletters are much longer than this, depending upon the amount or reports, minutes, events and submissions I receive. Very large articles, very small articles, and pictures are easily thrown in. I welcome your comments and concerns and please send them directly to me, Dunstan LeHeryngmongere at rangernealson at aol.com.

Again, this faux newsletter has some statements in it that are meant to entertain. In no way was any of it directed at individuals but rather they were directed at the trials and tribulations that I see people in officer positions go through all the time. I hope that it has served to entertain you, and I welcome (and in fact NEED) your feedback.

My thanks.
